Health app Well expands partner network in 10 cantons – medical profession and patients set to benefit

Schlieren, 14 February 2022 – Well, Switzerland's health platform, is now working in partnership with the doctors' networks Arzthaus, Centramed, and Monvia. For Well this marks another important step towards the digitalisation and integrated networking of the Swiss healthcare system. The aim is to connect doctors, pharmacies, health insurers, and other service providers in order to provide the Swiss population with independent, secure digital access to healthcare services and providers along the entire treatment path.

Via the cooperation with doctors' networks, the Well health app will in future provide large segments of German-speaking Switzerland with digital access to medical services and documents. The three doctors' networks have locations in the cantons of Aargau, Basel-Land, Basel-Stadt, Bern, Lucerne, Solothurn, St. Gallen, Uri, Zug, and Zurich. In addition to the founding partners CSS, Medi24, Visana, and Zur Rose, various other partners from a range of sectors within the healthcare system are already working with Well to break new ground. Around 2200 doctors are connected to Well and their numbers continue to expand.

Medical services, digitally streamlined

Anyone being treated by a doctor belonging to one of the three networks will continue to benefit from further streamlining in the future. The timeline will vary depending on the doctor's network: The digital practice sign-up for new patients and the extended sign-up including information on medical history are already in joint development. Further functionalities will be added on an ongoing basis. For example, appointments can be booked and managed via the Well app. In addition to this, the digital exchange of documents between the practice and the patient via the Well Medical Safe will be introduced and continually developed. Following the successful launch of the above functionalities, a use case will be developed for the structured transmission of data to medical practices, for instance that of blood pressure readings taken at home.

Simpler interfaces – more efficient processes

Well Gesundheit AG has reached another milestone on the journey to realising its ultimate vision: to achieve easier access to healthcare services across Switzerland and pioneer more efficient interfaces – paving the way for more cost-effective processes – within the healthcare sector. "Thanks to the partnership with Arzthaus, Centramed, and Monvia, Well users in future will benefit from digital streamlining across large parts of German-speaking Switzerland," explains Well CEO Alexander Bojer. "Well is expanding its partnerships all the time with the aim of putting health in the hands of app users. I am very excited about our next steps."

Independent enterprise

Well Gesundheit AG was founded in late 2020 by Well partners CSS, Medi24, Visana, and Zur Rose Group as a public limited company with headquarters in Schlieren. Alexander Bojer, start-up entrepreneur and former consultant at Boston Consulting Group and technology provider

Accenture, has occupied the post of CEO since 1 March 2021. The remaining members of the senior management team also join him from the ICT sector. They are Mario Bernasconi as Head of Business Development and Partnerships, Stephanie Künzli as Chief Product Officer, and Lukas Stadler as Chief Technology Officer.

About Well

The Well health platform stands for the digitalisation and streamlining of the Swiss healthcare system. As a mobile app, the platform provides digital access to quality-assured, individually tailored healthcare services via a single platform. Connecting all stakeholders, including doctors and pharmacies, means patients can find answers to their questions fast, make contact with medical providers, and take their wellbeing into their own hands.

Health insurers CSS and Visana, telemedicine and digital healthcare provider Medi24, and online pharmacy and technology partner Zur Rose Group are joint founders and operators of the Swiss digital healthcare platform. Well offers itself as an independent platform open to all parties in the healthcare system, especially health insurers and service providers.
